YOUR Cheapest Feed is GOOD PASTURE

Photo taken Nov. 30, 1951
Pasture, fertilized annually, results in grazing throughout the winter, lowering feed costs.

Pasture provides little or no winter forage . . . and is more subject to erosion.

PROPER USE OF LIME AND FERTILIZER MEANS PROFITABLE

"June Grazing In January"

Statistics compiled by the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute demonstrate the tremendous feed saving in continuous grazing — 100 pounds of digestible nutrients from good, permanent pasture costs about 50 cents. The same amount of nutrients from alfalfa hay costs $2.50 . . . and from a mixed dairy ration, about $5.00.

In addition to this profitable feed saving, green grazing through the summer and winter months means dairy cows produce more milk . . . beef animals fatten quickly . . . less barn feeding is required . . . labor costs are greatly reduced . . . and soil is protected from costly erosion.

Plan "June Grazing in January" on your farm by applying lime and fertilizer to your pastures. In dairying . . . and in livestock, poultry and pork production . . . take advantage of added profits that come with good pasture — your cheapest feed.

BETTER PASTURE MEANS BETTER PROFITS!

- Produces from 60 to 70 per cent more feed
- Reduces feed costs of producing milk about 20 to 25 per cent
- Produces 100 pounds of nutrients at a cost of about 50 cents
- Saves 15 bushels of corn and 500 lbs., of tankage (per acre) in producing pork
- Reduces the cost of raising pullets by at least 10 per cent

Woodlawn To Be Shrine

Alexandria, Dec. 12.– Woodlawn, destined to become a national shrine, has been accepted by the National Trust for Historic Preservation to restore and administer under terms of a 50 year lease, U. S. Grant, III, major general, U. S. A., retired, and president of the National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings, today advised the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development.

The lease was negotiated with the former owner, Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., a member of the National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings.

George Washington gave Woodlawn, originally a part of the Mount Vernon estate, to his adopted daughter, Nellie Custis as a wedding gift. He selected the site, surveyed the land, and drew the rough sketches which were the achitect's inspiration for the mansion.

Dr. William Thornton, architect of the national Capitol, inspired by the wooded site for the mansion and its view of the Potomac finished Washington's plans. The result is one of the nation's finest specimens of Georgian architecture. Woodlawn, 8 miles south of Alexandria and three miles west of Mount Vernon.

Nellie Custis, Washington's adopted daughter, and Major Lawrence Lewis, of Kenmore, his favorite nephew, were married at Mount Vernon on February 22, 1799, Washington's last birthday. The general gave the bride in marriage and although urged by Nellie to dress in a new and resplendent uniform, he appeared at the candlelight ceremony in the worn buff and blue of his campaigns.

Nellie and Lawrence Lewis lived at Woodlawn 35 happy years. With its nearness to Mount Vernon, the Custis home, Gunston Hall, George Mason's home, and Belvoir, the Fairfax seat and with its charming mistress and attractive master, the new home became the center of a brilliant social life. Early guests included the Marquis de Lafayette and other important European and American notables.

Several years ago the sale of Woodlawn was about to be consumated through the Fairfair County Circuit Court for uses which would have precluded its dedication to the public. The Woodlawn Foundation was formed and the historic home was purchased from the estate of the late Oscar W. Underwood, U. S. Senator from Alabama. In a ceremony on the front veranda on February 22, 1949, the 150th anniversary of the wedding of Nellie Custis and Lawrence Lewis, the ancient key of the mansion was presented to the president of the Foundation.

A gift of $200,000 from an anonymous donor has made possible a program of complete restoration, furnishing and development of a national historic museum of the early Federal period. It is is hoped that Woodlawn can be restored to its original condition as envisioned by Washington when he designed it. The estate will be open to the public during the period of restoration.
